Q: YUI Gallery set width for every entry in div Here's what I'm trying to accomplish. I want to have a selectable (with YUI's Gallery) set of thumbnails and I want to have the thumbnails resize with the browser, depending on what size I choose to display them on the page. But, what I want is that I don't want the width of each thumbnail to be static, and I don't want to have to enter specific values for the width of each thumbnail. This is the YUI Gallery I'm using: Example: Basically, what I want is for the "gallery" div to stretch to 100% width of the browser, then for each thumbnail within that div to be resized to whatever width I specify, and so that each thumbnail is lined up next to each other. I'm not finding a way to accomplish this without entering a specific width. I suppose I could specify the width in CSS, but then the parent would lose its width. Any ideas on how this could be accomplished? A: Update Here's a fiddle that solves your problem. I've made a little script for achieving this functionality. You just need to tweak the css styles for the img tags and the gallery tag.

in the past) We didn't know where we were going, but we knew that we were going there. We had our eye on that goal and we had a plan to get us there. Nothing more. We met her (the Leader) at the door and she slowly started the conversation. She listened to us and explained the program. We took a copy of the information and walked out the door. We didn't know what to expect, because we didn't know exactly what it was we were being sold. We were sold a vision of something that wasn't clearly defined ('and then He came, and had a billion billion trillion little pieces!') We didn't know if it was really true, but we knew we believed it. It was no longer an obligation. We knew we could follow Him for free. We were sold through a program we had to put effort into. We couldn't just 'do' it. It was something we had to actually 'get', instead of allowing what we had seen to just sit with us. She can be a little scary when you don't know who she is, but she's not intimidating. You can talk to her. I cannot tell you the impact this has had on my life. I used to wake up and have to 'put my faith in God' and make Him a part of my life. I'm not religious, but I've always felt that He was there somewhere, watching out for me. I just hadn't known it. What are some of the ways that you can discover that you are serving God when it isn't obvious? This may be more common for those who lead people by faith, but to me, it's an interesting lesson. When I first started going, the guy who taught me was awesome. As he was teaching, he would pick a page out of the Bible and tell me what verse it was, and then give me an explanation of what that meant. I looked at the page, and thought "Oh! He must be a really good Bible study!". And then I looked at the passage, and it said what it was. The guy wasn't a better Bible study. He was just a better man. Although
