Kaggle Notebooks use Kaggle Data Sets. For more information see the notebook page on Kaggle. Kaggle offers training sets for many datasets, such as the Iris, MNIST, Cancer, IMDB, Web, and Video datasets. If you are not familiar with Kaggle Data Sets, the product description page has a good definition of them and links to a video on Kaggle Data Sets. Edit: there is now a tutorial video that is very accessible. Odd people out. That's what it feels like to be a psychotherapist treating those who have bipolar. It's the little things -- the little things that can make us feel off the wall. Wednesday, July 19, 2015 It's the Little Things I am now wondering if I am a good example for my patients, even though they don't know that I am a recovering bipolar patient.

It's the little things, the things I do that help make me feel like I am at least a halfway good psychotherapist. Yesterday my patient called me for a session. That means she is bringing up issues that she wants to discuss during the session. When I call my patient, I know that I have an appointment and I can't say "Hi, it's Dr. M, do you have an appointment yet?" I usually wait for her to ask "How are you, do you need to reschedule?" This time she didn't say either of those things. She said, "Hey, it's Dr. M. It's your 6th session. How have you been?" In response I said, "I've been good, thank you." I wasn't sure if she wanted to talk about why she had texted me that day. So I asked, "Are you working on any projects?" At this point I was pretty sure she was going to tell me that she had another project to which she had to turn over this week. So I waited. Instead she said, "I just got a new job. I'm doing mostly administrative things, but I'm making good money. I'm liking it." I was confused. That was not what she had said in her first session with me. I wondered why she had taken the approach she did. She didn't talk much more. So I asked about that next week. She went back to her role as hostess for the theatre company she was 82157476af
